IN THE WORLD OF SOCIETY

atumn Doings Among Prominent Leaders of the Season's Gayety.

The Gamut of the Week's Events Sounded in Short Paragraphs-Guests and Entertainers-Personal Montion Reduced to a Compact Compass.

With little else by way of social diversion to occupy their attention, Scranton people, and particularly women, are interested in the great Madison Square horse show in New York; not because they are horse fanciers, but in order to keep tab on the social pulse of the famous event. The chief medium of information are the New York dailles, whose columns teem with what society wears, sees and does. The news accounts make the great equine show as much a display of well-dressed women and faultless Beau Brummells as a pareason one of swelldom's annual fads rade of fancy horseflesh, and for this maintains its stupendous popularity. If only horsemen, pure and simple, were interested in the show, it would exist only through gasping effort and might be impossible. But because women and men who don't know a cob from a dray horse, a hackney from a runner, or a jumper from a thoroughbred-because these choose to smile upon the sawdust enclosure, the rank and file of society falls in line and the Madison Square Horse show, which is another name for Parade of the Millionaires, is kept a success.

To one who has never attended the gala affair a visit would prove an awing revelation and a rare opportunity for studying character. Imagine, if you can, a building covering ground area equal to a Scranton city block. After passing through a commodious entrance the first view of the interior presents a general spectacle of dazzling splendor. As the eye takes in a sweeping glance of the huge roofed enclosure the magnitude and blazonry of the scene swallows details which may be comprehended later. It all looks like one giant flower and then comes an evidence of dazzling lights, kaleidoscopic colors from the gowns of splendidly dressed women, the sound of cracking whips and hum of voices and-a faint odor of horse. The center of all this pleasing confusion is a large oval-shaped enclosure with sawdust, then a promenade, then several rows of boxes, then many rows of seats, each particular oval space being crowded with its respective occupants. The several hundred boxes are occupied by those who have paid from $150 to $500 for the privilege and contain women mostly. Occasionally those of some particular box are interested in a friend's entry, which is showing its paces in the ring, but oftener the box spectators are munching bon-bons laughing in gay conversation or intent on studying the gowns of others. The wide promenade between the boxes and ring seems to be the privileged point of vantage for your real horseman, and there he may be found in his many there he may be found in his many colored personality and style of dress. Here your scion of a wealthy house who quaffs champagne and draws his check is, rubs his immaculate at-the rough coat of the wno onews a sirs v and horsey in who chews a stre v and perhaps was only the price of . midnight beer and a sandwich after having paid his admission fee. Such is the scene of the great horse show without particular comment upon the equine. It, of course, has its place, but that is not what appeals to the majority of the gathering. The swells and fair women attend the show because it's quite the smart thing. They gaze on themselves and the lower strata, the lower strats returns the gaze in kind-and that's the great horse show and everybody is Secretaay Israel Outlines the Objects of the Associated Charities.

ASSISTANCE IS ASKED FOR

It Will Require Money to Carry Out the Objects That the Association Has in View-Report of Treasurer W. T. Smith.

At the meeting of the Board of Asso ciated Charities held last Tuesday night the annual reports of officers were read. Those of Secretary Rev. Rogers Israel end Treasurer W. T. Smith are printed below, and will be found worthy of careful perusal. Mr. Israel's report

In presenting the first annual report of the Associated Charities the direc-tors have thought it best that their portion should be addressed more particu-larly to the public, and that the workers in the society and a few others who thoroughly understand its methods and work should consider that the work of the agent could be perused by them for their information and instruction. There are in the community, outside of the members of the board and their immediate co-workers, those who, being ignorant of the principles of the organization, have during the past year felt it incumbent on them to cond it, asserting that it was but one other organization added to the many for the pauperizing of the needy of the city. We think, however, that a candid investigation of our methods and the objects of the society will show that we have brought into being not another charitable organization, but one through which all the others might find a head and basis. It has been our in-tention and effort during the past year to bring into harmonious working and simple methods the distribution of charity by both individuals and organ-izations of our city. To say that we have done this would be too much, but we can state that we have made a beginand state that we have made a degle-ning along the line of making the de-pendent independent, and the pauper self-supporting. To the better under-standing of the methods of our society we would state plainly the objects:

Objects of the Society. First-To secure the concurrent and harmonious action of the different charities of Scranton in order

Second-To raise the needy above the need of relief. Third-To prevent begging and imposition and to diminish pauperism.
Fourth-To encourage thrift, self-dendence and industry through friendly intercourse, advice and sympathy.

Fifth-To aid the poor to help them-Sixth-To prevent children from growing up as paupers. Seventh-To aid in the diffusion of knowledge on subjects connected with the relief of the poor.

To accomplish these results it is de-First-To provide that the case of every applicant for relief shall be thoroughly investigated. Second-To place the results of such investigation at the disposal of the sec-retary of the poor board, charitable societies and agencies and of private persons of benevolence. Third-To obtain employment if pos-sible, if not, to obtain so far as necessary suitable assistance for every de-serving applicant from the public au-thorities, charitable agencies or benevo-ent individuals.

Fourth—To make all relief, either by alms or charitable work, conditional upon the good conduct and progress. Fifth—To send to each poor family under advice of the proper authorities a friendly viette.

Sixth-To hold public meetings and print papers for distribution.

Only Begun Its Work. As we read these objects again we find that our society, while formulating its work during the past year, has only begun the great development which it hopes to reach in future years. It has been found absolutely necessary, under the strain placed upon the society last winter, during the hard times, to have a fund upon which call could be made for cases of emergency. The giving of charity was and is totally contrary to the object for which the society is es-tablished, but the need was met first by the mayor's fund, upon which orders could be given from time to time by the agent and then by the emergency fund, which is still in existence. It was the intention of the society to divide the city into districts, and to have volunteer visitors, who could report to the authorized agents of the society, but owing to the lack of preparation and the uncertain condition of affairs relating to charity in the city it was deemed wisest for the first year to let the organization develop along the lines best suited to our city. We find ourselves now in a position to go forward with the work outlined above, and we hope this winter to see every case placed in the hands of some wise and benevolent individual. This has been accomplished to a great extent through the priests and ministers of the city, and we be lieve can be perfected under their advice and guidance so that there need be no needy person uncared for in our Seeks to Find the Cause. As the scientist and the student seek for the cause of all irregularities in na-ture and in morals, so this organization seeks to find the causes for poverty and need, and, finding these causes, to do away with them and thus alleviate the case at its inception. To this end an agent has been employed to thoroughly investigate every case referred and every application made to her. This has necessitated over 900 visits upon application of individuals themselves or some one interested in each case. These investigations have been tabulated and the name, residence, nationality, re-ligious persuasion, age, civil condition, present need, cause thereof and the amount of ald rendered recorded. These records have been carefully filed away and have been made use of in making up the report of the agent. It is with a very deep appreciation of our in-debtedness to Mrs. W. B. Duggan, the agent, that we would here acknowledge her wise, discreet and firm administra-tion of this department. We believe that it has been due to her wisdom that the organization has attained to the efficiency which we find today, and to which all advance in the future must look back. No one who has not had the experience can realize what tact, gentleness and firmness it requires to make these investigations and to find the truth in each case without injuring the independence or destruction. independence or destroying the confi-dence of the individual investigated. But we see most clearly from the facts which we have already had presented during the past year, from the tabu-lated report which will be given later and from our own personal experience that the work has been done most ef fectually in relieving the distressed and encouraging the disheartened.

Finding Employment. It has devolved upon the society to find means for giving employment to find means for giving employment to unemployed laboring men and women, who, through, the stringency of the times, have been thrown out of work during the past year. This, again, seemed to be another departure from our proposed line of work, but was one that was rendered necessary by the circumstances. To accomplish this we secured the co-operaitno of the street and park commissioners. Men were given work upon the streets and in the parks at $1$ a day for several days at a time. at $1 a day for several days at a time, thus enabling a large number of men to tide over the necessities of the time until they could secure employment at the usual remunerative rates. A mina-ture wood-yard was also opened through which employment was given to a few men. The street commissioner also succeeded in using a number of men at the stone crusher. The office of the agent became also an employment office, where laboring men and women could leave their names and where in-dividuals needing work done could secure those without work to do it. The agents report will show how much has been accomplished by this means. Indeed, we have found in this, our first year that was the control of the cont year, that we have had to make the society very pliable in its workings. Everything seemed to depend upon re-lieving the immediate necessities of the F. E. Pratt Was Chosen President-New times, and we believe that upon close investigation, either by members or by those who are not in sympathy with our methods of work, it will be found that the relief which has been extended by this society through investigation and the finding of work, and the distribu-tion of the emergency fund (amounting in all to over $1,900) went far last win ter to prevent the suffering which then threatened so many in the city. give below the agent's report, which is a simple summary of the work which has been done through the office of the agent and her assistants during the Street Begging Evil. We must reiterate as emphatically as possible the evil which is done by indiscriminate giving on the street or at the door. Over 150 impostors have been found upon thorough investigation, who reside within our city living upon the alms of benevolent individuals. Some of these had bank accounts, others were keeping saloons, others secured sufficlent not only to support themselves in idleness, but to waste a great deal of which they obtained, and in almost every one of these cases it was found no suffering need ensue to the individual or to the family by cutting off their means of securing what they considered a living by begging. A num-ber of children have been taken in charge and cared for who were kept at their homes simply for the purpose of influencing the kindhearted to support idle and vicious parents. The society is now prepared to distribute 5,000 card books requesting those receiving them not to give anything to beggars, but to refer the applicant with one of the cards to the agent of this society, who will investigate and, if requested to do so, will report the result of the investiga-tion to the individual whose name may be signed to the card. We again urge upon all the people of our community to refuse to give to unknown applicants under any circumstance whatever. We are prepared to investigate cases imme and if necessary to report at once to the person desiring the investi-

This society is entirely dependent for support upon the generosity of the citizens of this community. It there-fore appeals to all who are interested in the wise and righteous dispensation of alms for means to carry on its work. The coming winter promises to be one of especial hardship among the poor. and it will require especial care on the part of the people to prevent impostors and those unworthy persons not needing assistance from securing aid which should be given to the worthy and needy ones. We ask, therefore, that contributions of money be sent to our treasurer, William T. Smith, as soon as possible urging the necessity of carrying on this work until all those who are unworthy may be so impressed with the strictness of our surveillance that they will give up the business as un-profitable and devote themselves to some remunerative employment. If the money is forthcoming the board would gladly open a woodyard where men could be employed in preparing wood for the market, which wood could be sold and the expenses of the yard paid. For this purpose, however, there is need of a lot, fenced in, and a small building for offices. If the merchants and the housekeepers of the city would encourage the society we would very for a small fee paid by the one desiring to employ labor, men or women could be furnished We also advise the organization in our city of a society for children's aid, who could take charge of the many cases constantly referred to our child saving committee, and, by reducing the number of neglected waifs, relieve the city from many future criminals.

Scranton is celebrated for its generous support of every good work, and we would close our report with the heartiest thanks for the liberal contributions of the past year, respectfully requesting a continuance of both sympathy and support for the coming winter.

Fire Proof Building-Other Business Transacted.

Yesterday at 4.30 in the board of trade rooms was held the first business meeting in a number of years of the members of the Lackawanna County Historical institute. J. A. Lansing was chosen chairman, and J. H. Fisher, secretary. As has heretofore been stated the object of the meeting was to form a reorganization of the institute. The first business was the reading of the minutes of the last meeting held, which was in February, 1889, at the arbitration room in the court house. At that session officers and a board of directors were elected. The death of Colonel J. A. Price, who was president, and then the leading impulse of the institute, appears to have thrown the organization into a chaotic state.

A. W. Dickson explained that the time had come when the remaining members of the society thought that steps should be taken to place the institute on a basis that corresponds to the standing that a society of its character in a city of the progressiveness of Scranton warrants. The society, he thought, was born to live, not to die and he saw no reason why it could not become the power for good that all such societies bring to a community.

Report of Treasurer. George W. Phillips, treasurer, made his report verbally. He said that the money in his hands is in the bank, and he would be pleased to have an auditing committee appointed to investigate his accounts. He stated that as near as he could judge the amount is something over $600. The chair appointed on the auditing committee F. E. Platt and Dr.

Veutriloquist Charley Hartley Throws a

Those who know Charlie Hartley will not be surprised at reading the following episodes, for which he was responsible, lately in one of New York city's fashionable boarding houses:

"It is the divil." "I'll never stay here another day." "Oh, Mr. Hartley, can't you tell us why this is?"

"Sure, I'll sleep all night with a light in me room. "They must be banshees, or fairles." Among some of the colored classes the notion prevailes that to drive away the spirits, one must cross the water. This thought was uppermost in poor Bar-

The now famous Fanny Stryker, the medium, was the former occupant of the house. To their credulous minds there was some ground for their fenrs. The notorious Fanny has even now a great following. Poor Barney mustered up courage enough to inquire, as he supposed, of the spirits:

The voice came as before, "I will appear to you at 12 o'clock tonight." They all stood affrighted. In a far-away voice was called out I now leave you; good night, good

"I'd nevah sleep here tonight. I'm goin' to cross de watah."

True to his word he did "cross de watah," for he slept that night at the home of a friend in Hoboken. The joker was compelled to explain the delusion to the other servants, because for half an hour they were all packing up their gooods to vacate, and had notified the "missus."

Mr. Martell Was Scared. Another scene was enacted in the reeption room later on. A Mr. Martell and friend called and were duly ushered in, when the usual salutations followed. They were scarcely seated before the missiles came with great violence. Martell and his friend arose to their feet in terror, as did Mr. Hartley, feigning fright, and going to the windows, closed them hurriedly, closing the door in turn.

It rained. It poured. They demanded an explanation of their hostess. The sepulchral tone gave in answer, "It is L I am here in the room." The affrighted pair could only gasp in orror "What is this? What is this?"

Lost labor. The missiles came still.

"I will see you in the dead of night," eplied the ungeen visitor. Their fear was alike to that of the servants. In extenuation, it may be argued, there was ground for their fears. They knew the former occupant was Mrs. Strycker, and to those who know this the suspicion is ever domi-
